

Racing Apollo: The Extraordinary True Story of NASA's Journey to the Moon

In the 1960s, the United States and the Soviet Union were locked in a fierce race to be the first nation to put a man on the moon. The stakes were high, and both countries poured billions of dollars into their space programs. But in the end, it was the United States that triumphed, with Neil Armstrong becoming the first human to walk on the moon on July 20, 1969.
